Caroline Temlock Teichman is a photographer based in Stamford, CT. After obtaining an EdD in Education Administration from Fordham University, and while enjoying a full career in public education and government, Caroline turned to photography with an interest in visually capturing the simple, but rich and alluring pleasures of the moment.

“In my photography, I enjoy capturing simple, often everyday images, which evoke emotion. My interest is in composition, particularly as it relates to shape and color. Often my photographs are absent of people. The hope is that the viewer will place him or herself in, or otherwise interact with, the picture. My photographic style tends to be reactive, capturing a moment or image as it presents itself, without rehearsal. My greatest reward as a photographer is to capture an image that reflects the essence of the sensibilities and spirit of the moment, and relay that to the viewer.”

Caroline has taken photography classes both at the New School and at the International Center for Photography in New York City. She enjoys traveling; currently, her photographs reflect experiences in the United States, Canada, Iceland, Europe and the Middle East.

Caroline’s works have been exhibited at the Flynn Gallery and Art Society of Greenwich Gallery in Greenwich, the University of Connecticut Stamford Art Gallery, the Stamford Art Society Gallery, the Hudson City Bank in Cos Cob, the Sound Beach Grill in Old Greenwich, and in the 2013 ARTWALK in Stamford.
