DETAILS: As Winter turns to Spring, Stamford Downtown bids farewell to its winter lighting array. For years, Stamford Downtown has sponsored winter lights in order to add cheer to the Holiday Season and bring warmth during the cold Winter months. This year marked the expansion of the Stamford Downtown lighting programming with the addition of lighting to the street trees along Summer Street.

Stamford Downtown's lighting program is produced by the Christmas Lighting Company of Pearl River, New York and extends from mid-November until early March. The lighting program consists of eighty (80) street trees – with approximately 1,700 lights per tree – located along Bedford, Atlantic and Main Streets. Additionally, Stamford Downtown installs lighting at Latham and Kiwanis Parks. The display is highlighted by multi-color lights at two (2) large oaks at the Ferguson Library and Columbus Park respectively.

In total, Stamford Downtown's Winter Lighting program is comprised of almost 250,000 multi-color and warm-white lights in addition to a wall installation of 120 light rides at Kiwanis Park. The large oak tree at Columbus Park, alone, is the site of 63,000 lights and has become a staple of Downtown. All lights used in the program are LED thus greatly reducing the cost of the energy needed to power the display.

The Winter Lighting program not only offers illumination it serves as an investment that distinguishes Stamford Downtown within the City and region. The Winter Lighting Program provides yet another reason for individuals of all ages to visit Stamford Downtown. Stamford Downtown looks forward to next year's edition of the Winter Lighting Program.
